THE COMING SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The national Legislature is about to meet. To-morrow is the appointed session is necessary in order to fulfil the requirements of the constitution, otherwise there is no particular reason why the Nobles and Representatives should be called together at the present time.

It is only a few months ago since the extra session closed, during which the majority of the members were compelled to neglect their private affairs for the space of eight or nine weeks, and labored in a most energetic and painstaking manner to create a state of confusion and get us into all kinds of hot water. They proceeded and succeeded with an amount of skill and good intention which their most sanguine and hypercritical admirers never dared to prognosticate, and separated, pleased with themselves and pleased with all the world, because of the wonderful display of wisdom, of legislative ability, and of sagacious statesmanship they had exhibited. Since then the valuable time of the Supreme Court has been largely engrossed in declaring some of their acts repugnant to the constitution, and therefore invalid and of no effect.

It is very hard on our chosen legislators to require their services at Government house, for another term of two or three months, so soon. We could have done without them a little longer. We could well afford to have waited another year, or two years, or even ten years, as far as their law-making functions are concerned. Indeed, the peace, the prosperity, and the permanence of the country might be better served by their staying at home altogether. We always feel nervous and apprehensive when these gentlemen are assembled in council, to deliberate on the affairs of State, not knowing what act of folly may be perpetrated by inexperience or the desire to give an exhibition of supreme power, any moment. But the constitution ordains that the Legislature of the Kingdom shall meet in the month of May, 1888, and we submit without murmuring, to the decree, although feeling im- | bear.

pelled to commend the wisdom of the Cabinet in deterring the event about as late in the month as possible. The good, both of the people and of the Ministers, may have been unconsciously promoted by this arrangement. Who knows? Time will

The object of the session, of any session, is to legislate for the public good; and it is desirable in the highest degree that each and every member should be impressed with the importance of keeping this .object steadily before his eyes; and that a deep sense of duty and an intelligent recognition of the country's needs, should guide and permeate the actions of the members individually and the Assembly as a whole. The prevalence of narrow prejudices and the introduction of class or elique considerations, which may tend to gratify personal aims and temporarily advance individual interests, regardless of the general welfare, are decidedly objectionable, and we sincerely trust that nothing of the kind will disfigure the doings of the session.

The experience of the extra session,a few months ago, may be reasonably be expected to have better fitted the members for the work of the regular session about to begin. Many of them then essayed lawmaking for the first time in their lives-excellent and capable men it may be in the avocations to which they had been used, but with no more knowledge of legislation than a Lancashire cat of logarithms. The little schooling which that session afforded them should better qualify them for this session. Besides, they have had a few months for solitary reflection on the past and preparation for the future, and these are not likely to have passed unimproved. So we think the people are fully justified in expecting an exhibition of increased wisdom, discretion, and common sense by their representatives, when they again assemble in the legislative hall.

The main and most important measure of the session will be the Appropriation Act. But as this is prepared by the Ministry, and from its very nature can only be judged of on the whole by the Ministers, its discussion and passage should require but little time. In the line of general legislation, the less done the better. A few new laws may be needed by the country, but scarcely more than can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Perhaps more is demanded in the way of amendday and noon the hour for opening | ing defective laws already on the the regular session of 1888. This statute books. Wise men, wiser men than our wisest men, believe there is an easy possibility of too much legislation, and our wise men might manifest their wisdom by adopting the same belief.

Hasty legislation is also a possibility, which our own history conclusively proves. Necessary and beneficial legislation may be made oppressive, inoperative, or destructive through being in parts hasty and illconsidered. This a great cyil which the Legislature has the power to prevent, and we hope the coming session will be watchful and wise to prevent it.

Finally, let us beseech our legislators not to keep us on the tenterhooks too long. Gentlemen, do not undertake too much; only what is absolutely necessary; and you can do that, and do it well, too, in a very short time, say three or four weeks, and return to your homes rejoicing. That will be quite long enough to keep us in dread of some unseen and unknown calamity. We are not in a fit condition for any great sensation at the present time. We prefer peace and quietness, and the more of these we can get the better for our health and our happiness, our credit and our country. True, business with us is doll and money scarce; but you can do a very little to help us in these matters, otherwise than passing the Appropriation Bill. Just let us alone, and we shall come out all right in the end. For mercy's sake, don't startle and sensationalize us with some new scare, nor keep us longer than you can help in dread thereof. We need a little mild exeltement necasionally, to relieve our monotony; but our nerves have been too much shaken in the past to stand | lent Society and the Liliuokalani Edua very powerful shock at present. We have sufficient local talent for own moderate requirements. An occasional court trial, or Harry Byng's athletic show, or a literary ebullition from John F. Smith is quite equal to our needs. So, gentlemen, please respect our feelings, and do not impose upon us more than we can
